

George Klimowicz, with his incomparable wit, might say he has been playing clarinet since the early 1900s, well almost. For several years he went to the Waukesha home of Russ Dagon, then the Principal Clarinetist with the Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra, to take private lessons.

George practices daily. He can choose the day's tunes from several thousand musical scores which he has in his collection of clarinet sheet music. Every composition ever written for clarinet may be found by composer or type of music, including the full piano parts.

George, now retired from City employment and Taxi Cab driving, has participated in the University Community Orchestra, has given countless programs with pianist Betty Anderson, and graciously shares his musical gift by playing music for the elderly on a regular schedule.
